The number of ways that AirBlock strip doors from Simplex can help industrial door installers make money and please customers defies counting. For the end customer Simplex strip doors save on energy costs by maintaining better covering on open doors, and at the same time allowing easy access.

For the professional industrial door installer, ease of installation means that your work is quick, easy, and with Simplex products, maintenance free.

AirBlock Strip doors from Simplex Isolation Systems are the most effective way for factories and warehouses to reduce heating and air conditioning costs and control the environment in buildings with large industrial doorways. Strips easily separate to allow personnel and forklifts to pass, and then come again to keep the environment outside – where it belongs.

AirBlock strip doors keep exterior wind from entering the interior working areas, help you control dust, and eliminate problems with birds and insects.

AirBlock Strip Doors are made from exceptionally clear virgin vinyl that resist yellowing and cracking longer. Vinyl strips are shipped flat to prevent curl and install with a minimum of tools. Simplex also offers a selection of patented mounting systems, Choose the model depending on your specific application. All mounting systems are based on Simplex's "bonded-bead" design, which allows the strip to freely pivot in the mounting, with less stress at critical points. The "bonded-bead" design also allows you to change out and rotate strips easily and within minutes. Additionally, all hardware is anodized to protect against corrosion.

Simplex Strip Doors are also ideal for walk-in coolers, walk-in freezers, cold-storage doors and refrigerated trucks and trailers.

Founded in 1979, Simplex Isolation Systems designs and manufactures custom isolation products and systems that are modular and easily expandable.
